

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An information signal processing apparatus includes a first information signal reading unit for receiving or reading a predetermined first information signal. A second information signal reading unit receives, detects, or reads a second information signal which includes attribute information regarding the first information signal. A characteristic detecting unit detects a predetermined characteristic of the first information signal from the first information signal reading unit.